We have another new number one song this week. It comes from Robin Scott, or "M" as he bills himself. His unusual song's elevation to the top is overshadowed by Styx, whose latest hit, "Babe," leaped from twenty-two to three. It is a sure bet for number one next week. Also in the top ten, the Eagles climb two more notches after their jump of twenty five last week.

Below the top ten, at number thirteen are the Commodores, who this week fall from the top. Their followup hit, "Still," moves up fifteen notches this week. At number seventeen, moving up seven is "Rainbow Connection," as sung by Kermit the Frog. At number eighteen, still hanging on after fifteen weeks on the list is "My Sharóna," from the Knack. Moving up big in its second week is "Hold On," done by English newcomer Ian Gomm.

Jumping eight this week are the Cars, with "It's All I Can Do," from "Candy-O." At twenty-eight is one of the oddest songs ever released. It's "Tusk," the title song from the new Fleetwood Mac album. The song is noteworthy because of its haunting vocal and accompaniment by the USC marching band. Debuting this week at thirty are KC and the Sunshine Band, with a ballad called "Please Don't Go." Other debut songs are a rerecorded version of "5:15" by the Who, originally from their 1973 "Quadrophenia" album. Also debuting this week are new ones from the Little River Band, Elton John, Blondie, and the Electric Light Orchestra.
